

Autumn, A Simple Truth

a moment of my life shared with you will never be forgotten from this cradle's ledge i count the rings
of my time on earth imagining myself content needing to dissolve this taste of wasted dreams
and within my head
this gray begins to grow please let me tear it all away and i will set free you and i
drawing strength
from the point of contact dna fireflies within and in another moment i'd refuse to chance these preparations after 25 years of building to the settlings grounds we go a place to pool
and to be snythesized
into the rest now
this is where the cybersoldiers hold the line
in weary vigilance
but i believe them now
i never thought i would
i never thought i would
and this is why a moment of my life shared with youyou
will never be forgotten
no, it will never be forgotten