

Away From It All, The Summer Of Cicaida one glance back and I'm back through the door clawing at the bed sheets my body melts through the mattress as my mind starts to wander I need you to tell me how we lost something so great there's no waiting this out your love is more than criminal I'll die here without you there's too much that dies down here caring's so over rated you cut the ribbons and I'm lost in the breeze I've hit the floor but our names are still etched on the ceiling how impossible we now seem
