

Ayla Nereo, Hollows Cove

In the moonlight one dark night was shown,
Oh darkened dead-eye,
When the shadows did move and the wind did moan,
Oh darkened dead-eye,
And the wind did moan ohooo down in Hollows Cove.

Underground was a sound and the earth did rise,
Oh darkened dead-eye,
Boundary broke and souls awoke up to the night.
Oh, I could see them plain in sight down in the Hollows cove

On the wind they flew the wind they flew woowoowoo,
And with silvery sighs the silvery moon they cut in two,
And from their eyes fell the tears like evening dew,
To the earth from where they'd come and be pulled soon.

On the wind, on the wind, they did soar
Woooo
To the homes that they 'd left on the farthest shore
Woooo
To the ears of the child's sleeping child
Listen darling
I shed this tear for the fear you have at your side
Little darling,

So Sleep sweetly sleep sweetly
Don't you wake till the morning light
I've come to take all that troubles you
I've come to rest at your side.

Sleep sweetly and dreaming
May these two arms you feel
And peaceful replace here the fear that wakes you from sleep
This one night of the year I will bury it, bury it deep
Sleep sweetly, sleep sweetly
For I'll bury it, bury it deep

The shadows moved and the wind did moan.
The child awoke the child awoke but did not feel alone.
And open ear he did have when whisper spoke.
In your dreams I will come and with your fears I'll go
To bury them deep deep deep down in the soil

So don't you be afraid of the Hollows Cove, child
