Babylon Whores, Life Fades Away

How high the Sun For the Lovers, for the Moon For the Hanged Man For the Fool

Tread gently with your dancing feet Over past men in righteous sleep The princes pale the life that failed Poisoned they too once had their day

Dance over the graves And scream for solace out of day With a grimoire, syringe, a mind unhinged Oh come what ever may

Watching the world Pass us slowly by A corpse into quicklime Black beneath your eyes

Hey Life fades away

How high the Sun For the Devil, for the World For the Temperance The Death's dance

In garden green the worm and fiend Weave beautiful each our dream Eat at the timbers of sanity And then we wake up into

Dance over the graves And scream for solace out of day With a grimoire, syringe, a mind unhinged Oh come what ever may

Watching the world
Pass us slowly by
A corpse into quicklime
Black beneath your eyes

Swords to sever limb Wands to grind the bone Cups to drain the blood Coins to shut the eyes

Life fades away

Dance over the graves Come what ever may