Barclay James Harvest, When The City Sleeps

In the shining sun
My images they run
Confusing all I've done before I've begun
And every city scene
Becomes a roaring stream
A nightmare and a dream rolled into one

But when the city sleeps I'm up and on my feet Along the darkened streets Hear me run

Through the empty town Running, laughing, down No-one else around - to bother old me By factories I sway My shadows seem to play To do this in the day - I'd never be free

But when the city sleeps....
