

Bastille, Quarter Past Midnight

it's a quarter past midnight as we cut through the city the streets are getting restless good times bad decisions it's quarter past midnight and the sirens are mending some hearts but we're the losers on the back seats and your love will tear us apart

still we're fighting tomorrow
but we're just getting going we keep on running running through a red light like we're trying to burn the night away

away och, away

this is favorite part och
help me piece it all together darling before it falls apart
help me piece it all together

and the speakers are blowing we want the bodies on the billboards not the lives underneath them and now we're crawling out the walls again and it's a quarter past the word and you said we'd leave this place in dust and fall from heaven straight through hell we never know what we have we never know what we had

we keep on running

why are we always chasing after something like we trying to throw our lives away

I can't remember /4x

and the secrets are flowing our lips are getting looser I don't know what I'm saying we never knew what we had I never know what I've had

away och, away
