

Bathory, Blooded Shore

Dark is the sea raging waves endless the sky above me mighty is the wind that fills our sail many us will follow our journey brave The day when ice would break and sun was high we sailed with wind of fate across the seas we followed the stars bright in the night
The land was bleak and could not provide sail across the sea with the wind and tide brothers at my side
our blood the same
Oden up high
I call thy name
Through the fog they will come in the dawn with the wind from the raging sea beware of the men of the North they will sail down the blooded shore with the wind they will return to the seas Down foreign shores all land would sleep silent at the dawn with fire and steel by our swords, silver and gold our journey glorious tales will be told
The day when ice would break and sun was high
we sailed with wind of fate across the seas
The land was bleak and could not provide
brothers at my side
our blood the same
Oden up high
with the wind they will return to the seas
