

Ben Kenney, Conception And The Funeral

i've always dreamt
of something beautiful between conception and the funeral and now i'll wait if that's where i'll find it i spent a lot on something trivial i couldn't tell you what was meaningful till now i got a taste of the feeling there aint no use in being practical the motors running and the tank is full let's get on the road before the morning comes come with me for a day and the distance will drive the pain away of that i'm sure there isn't anything else you need to take nothing material in any case so now we'll make a plan when we get there sometimes there's promises you have to break so only make the ones you have to make and i know how to handle my expectations
you're nervous and you want to hesitate afraid the whole thing might be a mistake so now just let your heart do the thinking i've never been so sure about anything in my life i've never felt this way about anything someday i'm gonna run away with you and if it's only for a day or two then
there isn't anything i'd rather do then leave the world behind (lyric book says "then" - should it be "than"?) and be with you so now
i've always dreamt of something beautiful
between conception and the funeral
and i'll wait
what was meaningful
