Ben Lee, No Right Angles

No Right Angles

ive been thinking 'bout the straight and narrow slip sliding round the back of my hand keep turning and its almost tomorrow ill find a way to make you understand there are no right angles in my life no right angles in my life right now im hearing nothing but silence high beams are on - i can feel you every piece contains a little bit of violence and you've changed so much but its still you no right angles in my life no right angles in my life so breathe feel the open space leave it all behind coming into grace no right angles in my life there are no right angles in my life suspicious minds and youre back on the warpath all the things you think are up my sleeve though you tell me that im just like a circle somehow you still dont believe there are no right angles in my life there are no right angles in my life so dream

let your body play anyone in need
give it all away no right angles in my life there are no right angles in my life

ive been thinking 'bout the straight and narrow slip sliding round the back of my hand keep turning and its almost tomorrow find a way to make you understand please taste the sea you sail baby i believe theres no way you can fail no right angles in my life there are no right angles in my life there are no right angles in my life