Bernard Butler, I'm Tired

I'm tired, I can't explain, all the troubled notions scrambling my brain. I'm tired, let me be for now. There was a time when I was interested by you, but it isn't now. If only I could escape leave a dummy in my place, slip away through the walls, not listen at all. I'm tired, I can't explain. I may as well have been talking to myself by the look on your face. I'm high, I don't feel myself. I think I should feel happy but I only want to lie down. If only I could escape leave a dummy in my place, slip away through the walls, not listen at all. I'm tired, I might go away, I'm tired, I've no more to say, I'm tired, I'm tired. So take me, take me away.