

Bird York, Breathe Deeply

Girl scattered ripped to pieces by her brother's murder one thought too many one thought too much her gentle levy burst lives with her mother in a basement with their seventeen years of blame can't stop the knawing
"I should have's" clawing it is the circle of her pain breathe deeply you're not alone breathe deeply now breathe deeply he's safe with god rest your head now she has no father, no hero husband to help her gather her ends so she imagines the dj loves her lives for the music he spins radio humming, two fingers drumming over the red scar bracelet she once made her mind keeps playing her brothers slaying and she's scattering once again breathe deeply you're not alone
breathe deeply now
rest your head now
she says, "I dream, i dream about him he is lost and all alone how can I sleep until i free him" she keeps stumbling under the weight of his ghost breathe deeply you're not alone
breathe deeply now
rest your head now
breathe deeply now
rest your head now
