Black Label Society, Shallow Grave

The fall within this hole My eyes are blind, yet I see Lifeless and dark No need to feel or be Mourned the passing of myself I saw today All that I once held I watch it fall away Nothing left to say The broken pieces that fill This shallow grave Buried and left alone I find myself Empty and withdrawn Mourned the passing of myself I saw today All that I once held I watch it fall away Nothing left to say The broken pieces that fill This shallow grave The walls cave as the end begins As it all comes crashing down I hear a voice I know too well It comes to me and pulls me down It pulls me down All that I once held I watch it fall away Nothing left to say The broken pieces that fill This shallow grave I mourned the passing of myself I saw today The broken pieces that fill This shallow grave
