

Blindside, Black Rose

Black rose where are you now White skin, as cold as the snow we walked in 'n' your lips like midnight, that night we walked for hours and i remember, but maybe i'm the only one, who still remembers

You Slipped away, but why would you come back to say you already moved on You slipped away, but i've come back to say that you're not really gone, you're not really gone

My black rose where are you now And yes i've seen your black rose petal fall fall down to the ground like glass shatters and turnin' into ashes but i've seen your colour and it's like a blood drop and maybe i'm the only one, who still remembers

you've already moved on
You slipped away, but i've come back to say
that you're not really gone, you're not really gone

So try to disappear but m'mind doesn't slip that easy You can try to disappear but my dear, you're still standin' here You're still standin' here

Cause you slipped away, but why would you come back to say you've already moved on
You slipped away, but i've come back to say
that you're not really gone, you're not really gone.
