Blonde Redhead, Misery Is A Butterfly

Dearest Jane I should've known better But I couldn't say hello, I didn't know why But now I think, I think you were sad Yes you were, you were

What I say, I say only to you Cause I love and I love only you Dearest Jane, I want to give you a dream That no one has given you

Remember when we found misery We watched her, watched her spread her wings And slowly fly around our room And she asked for your gentle mind

Misery is a butterfly Her heavy wings will warp your mind With her small ugly face And her long antenna And her black and pink heavy wings

Remember when we found misery We watched her, watched her spread her wings And slowly fly around our room And she asked for your gentle mind