

Bloodjinn, Leave This World Breathing

"Where were you"?

My thought screamed. "Do you even love me"? Oh how my heart ached.

Abandoned to the horror of my solitude, "where were you?" "where were you?"

"where were you?" Lifeless and loved less. double shifts and overtime, don't make sense to a lonely child. Your absence is the void, growing within my soul. "where were you?" lifeless and loved less. How the tears came so easily.

Now that you have departed from this world, an age has come when questions are abound, inquiries into your existence and life. I then recalled something you said, so profound... "I never claimed to have all the answers, although you thought I should, I was driven by love, motivated by you. I tried to provide the best that I could, I tried to provide the best that I could." I couldn't grasp their meaning that solemn day, but your tone moved through my heart, driven by love, I have kept them safe, since that solemn day, knowing that they would one day ring true, driven by love. So I sit here alone again while he is dreaming thinking of you and everything. I didn't understand. I long to go back to my days as a child, and re-live life without a heart and a handful of hate...

forgiveness.

As I hold him in my arms, all I can think of is you, I finally understand what kind of hell you were going through. We are all driven by love. We are all sometimes sacrificed for the sake of love, As we leave this world breathing.