

Bloody Sunday, Dead Silent

i've seen
angels
open arms
and cast down nations until nothings left
the stubborn heart
kills thoughtful minds
still they hate when evidence
stares them in the face the threat is real
even when heaven is silent there is a calm before the storm when every man

will call on the name of God
and he will judge this wicked world

i am not your enemy
i just see what you refuse to see why do you
choose to live in an enclosed room
when his light casts no shadow for all you know this could be your dying day you never know when your life will be taken away we tend to think that man has all the answers we think

we know everything
but we are wrong
this world is cursed
now its time
to sentence the dead
this is the end
times been spent
blood's been spilled
so that we can live

the time will come when every knee shall bow and every tongue will confess your time is running out let the curtains fall

let the camera fade
this is your final call before the fires blaze where every wrong's made right darkness will turn to light there is no place to hide its time to choose a side
to sentence the dead