Blue Foundation, Ghost

Early morning, dreary horizon Aching hands are pulling a millstone Wailing from the cart Moaning from a shattered heart

He's burned down many a bridge And he's scared of walking in the dark It hurts when the rain falls on his skin

Oh he is worn out from marching And he's forgotten for what he's searching Yet he keeps up the stride God knows that he won't arrive