

Blues Traveler, Change

Music & lyrics: John Popper

I can feel the autumn on the summer's heels
I hate to notice how much colder the night it feels
And you're leaving
Yes, you're leaving
Time to change
Time to change

I can remember a time not too long ago
But now I almost wish I didn't so
These memories wouldn't hurt me so
Wouldn't hurt me so
Afraid of change
Afraid of change

Just take what you learn from your past
Feel your heart and your mind yearning and burning and learning and turning so fast
So damn fast
Freedom of change
Freedom of change

Time for your dreams to be put to test

Time to find out that you're just like the rest
It's so deceiving
So deceiving
A part of change
A part of change

Can you feel the excitement that's about to take place
A bold new adventure with so many dangers you must face
At times you'll hope, but you're all to hold on to
And freedom, and untold possibilities couldn't stop you
Some freedoms make you free to last
Of all the questions you might ask, let this one go
Let this one go
Will I change
Yes you will change

So the road is yours and without end
Remember me always, because I am your friend
I am your friend
And now change
You and I will change
And we'll be all right
Yes we will
