

Blues Traveler, Home Is Where You Are

Music & lyrics: John Popper

Barbara, won't you listen for a while
I so honestly, honestly need to smile
I've never felt the need to say goodbye
When you keep someone in your heart
You never leave them behind

Leave it all behind
Is it a home you'll find
Need I dare remind
That home's where you are

Lately I've seen your face, and I'm afraid
I try to sing you your song, but the lyrics they fade
Then I look again, and new words fill my ears
As I see a friend that I love, it calms all my fears

No, I'll shed no tears
Best friends of years and years
And as the bridge soon nears
I'll say home's where you are

Home's where you are
It's in everything you do
Home's where you are
You're gonna find out that it's true
Home's where you are
In every song you play
Home's where you are
Even in what you can't say

Barbara, won't you listen for a while
I so honestly, honestly need to smile
