Bob Schneider, Oklahoma

She came from Oklahoma She said the end of the world Was on its way in a Chevy nova She came from Oklahoma She said the end of the world Was on its way in a Chevy nova

Her smile was just a shadow That trembled in the sun And turned to stone as she grew older Her smile was just a shadow That trembled in the sun And turned to stone as she grew older

She bought an El Camino
And a pocket full of pills she called her
And swore she's found salvation
But the hand grenades inside her
Where ready to explode
And the pins were pulled long ago
By sweet temptation

She found herself in New Orleans With carnival of tears upon her veins In the arms of strangers When the lies where not enough To hold back all the years of pain She'd lie inside the danger and cry

You can tie me to the ground but not today I need me one more chance to fly away And tonight I'm gonna fly away
