

Bob Seger, Somewhere Tonight

Somewhere tonight
Someone's reaching out to someone who's refusing Someone's tired of all the reasons someone's using Someone doesn't understand

Somewhere tonight
Someone's thinking back to someone who got closer
Someone's realizing something's really over

Someone's thinking it's too late
Someone's thinking it's too late

There's a cold wind blowing from the north
And the summer birds are leaving
As the sun slips ever further south
The lakes will soon be freezing

And the ice will claim the empty shores
Where the ones in love went walking
And the hard blue skies will shiver
As the winter clouds come stalking

And unless you find someone to hold
Unless someone starts caring
Unless you find the warmth you need
Unless someone starts sharing

When the long nights start closing in
And the winter winds come howling
You don't know if you'll make
Without someone you can count on

Somewhere tonight
Someone's packing up
And someone's really leaving

Someone's not quite sad
Only disbelieving

Someone's walking out the door
Someone's walking out the door
