

Bonepony, The Crush

There was a woman like no other let me tell you so
She was every womans good poured into one
And if heaven was on earth, Lord she could take me there
She was blinding like early morning sun.

Bright as the sun
(She don't know about this love. How could she know?)
Warm like the sun
(I never told her, never told her so.)

She'd come on Wednesdays and sometimes she come on Saturdays
I always met her with infatuated smiles.
And even though I realized our love could never be,
My heart was tethered like a mule tied to a plow.

Love tied me down.
(She don't know about this love. How could she know?)
Love kept me down.
(I never told her, never told her so.)

(She don't know about my love. How could she know?)
How could she know?
(I never told her, never told her so.)
That I love her and I needed her.

The hands of time can't wash away the tears I've cried
Oh, no river wild could smooth my ragged brow
Like dead leaves caught in a whirlwind on a bare schoolyard
I'm trapped in fear that I'll only be let down

Don't let me down
(She don't know about this love. How could she know?)
Please don't let me down
(I never told her, never told her so.)

(She don't know about my love. How could she know?)
How could she know?
(I never told her, never told her so.)
That I love her and I needed

Well the wind won't blow
And the sky get cold
But it never does snow
Cause a boy loves but once
The first times the lonely one.

Na, na, na...
