

Bonnie Pink, Mirror

As passing by a cat with green eyes
I realized
How miserable I had been
And how comfortable I had been like Those eyes looked jealous and scared at
The world out there
I didn't know lords of things
I have known too many things now

Wish you were my mirror
Share the grief
Spare the smile for each other
No need to speak
to be understood

I am who I am
Can you be yourself?
Or is it easier to lie?
I am who I am
Can you be yourself
Right next to me

As shaken by the train
I asked myself
How far away we could go
And how many times we have tried in vain

When I try to grab you
Everytime, you jump the rails
It feels like faith is vanity
I don't wanna lose my sanity

I wish I were your mirror
Giving a kiss is getting a kiss
Against each other
No need to fight to be accepted

I am who I am
Can you be yourself?
Or is it easier to lie?
I am who I am
Can you be yourself
That's all I care
I am who I am
Can you be yourself?
Or is it easier to lie?
I am who I am
Can you be yourself
Right next to me

Look into the mirror
Move the way you want to
I just want to be in the same frame
Look into the mirror
Move the way you want to
I just want to be in the same frame

I am who I am
Can you be yourself?
Or is it easier to lie?
I am who I am
Can you be yourself
That's all I care
I am who I am

Can you be yourself?
Or is it easier to lie?
I am who I am
Can you be yourself
Right next to me