Brandi Carlile, Follow

Follow your heart and see where it might take you Don't let the world outside there break you They know not who you are inside They've never felt your hell Don't ever let them crack

Hold out I know you feel it getting cold out Without the blanket for your soul and Before you know it you'll be frozen And you have to see this through There's no one here but you

I feel the rain coming down
It reminds me of who I used to be
But now that's nothing more
Than a memory

Don't go to sleep and cry because Tomorrow if you let it, it will swallow You up and none of this will matter Anymore

I feel the rain coming down It reminds me of who I used to be But now that's nothing more Than a memory...

Follow your heart and see where it might take you Don't let the world outside there break you They know not who you are inside They've never felt your hell Don't ever let them crack your shell