

Brian Rice, Not Enough

There's something wrong with the world
Something wrong that defies mere words
None of the adjectives I know
Are adequate to show the pain
Love's still in need of love today
I watch TV, I watch my street
But the peace in my backyard is bittersweet
I take responsibility
I contradict the things I see
But I'm inheriting a past that's on repeat
I can keep on hoping
It's not enough
I can say I'm sorry
It's not enough
Cause if I can't get up & practice what I preach
It's not enough, it's just not enough
I'm judging you but I do it too
It's easy to be a hero in your living room
A little goes a long way
Act locally, love globally
If each one teach one, that would be
More than enough for me
I can keep on hoping
It's not enough
I can say I'm sorry
It's not enough
Cause if I can't get up & practice what I preach
It's not enough, it's just not enough
What can I do, when can I start
How can I change?
Who can I love, where can I lead
What can I change?
What can I say, how can I help
How can I change?
How can I change? How can I change?
Chorus x 3
