

Broken Hope, Gobbling Guts

Cannibalistic cravings I enjoy dining upon the flesh to the living or deceased.
I drool at the thought of soft fleshy organs, prepared or raw to become my feast, I consume innards, chase them down with blood swallowing mouthfuls of the nauseating swill, Sauteed lungs, barbecued stomachs,
cooked and raw organs, I'll eat my fill,

gobbling guts intestinal fortitude gobbling guts dine upon organs gobbling guts disembowel the abdomen gobbling guts eat the fetal embryo gobbling guts baptized in the pancreas gobbling guts shower in excrement

On the stiffs I dish out the entrails and prepare to enjoy a delicious corpse feast, to be uncouth is usually accepted,
I chew the bones clean like a beast, Intestines I find are hard to chew through, a tug of war as I pull, stretch, and gnaw, Digestive juices somewhat scald my palate, blood, gore, viscera, salivate down my maw.

Now I gobble your purulent fking guts

Fresh warm eyeballs are a delicacy,
I pluck them out, and then hastily chomp, Sally to the taste, but sometimes sour,
I cause them to burst with a stomp, Undissected abdomens are cornucopia, sickly munching on a cadaveric platter, My macabre appetite makes meals from men, gobbling deceased organs and splatter.
