

By Heart, At Twilight Time

I was just an animal waiting for a prey
I was getting weaker everyday
I lost my head, I lost my feet, I fell down on my knees
I wanted to be anyone but me

And then you walked into my life; you dared to cross my line
You said I'm not an animal to you
The more I fought the more I felt how silly it may sound
But now I know how poets feel inside

You're so sweet, you say to me: "You will later be the one to win"
In a dream when you sleep you will finally admit that
Things are getting better here
At twilight time

I made you my religion 'cause in you I put my trust
And in you I find a better world to be in
And with you I'm not a victim and with you I'm not a fool
You I follow blindly like a child

You're so sweet, you say to me: "You will later be the one to win"
In a dream when you sleep you will finally admit that
Things are getting better here
At twilight time

One hour of your time
Is more to me than one's entire life
One hour of your love
Is more to me than anything I need

You're so sweet, you say to me: "You will later be the one to win"
In a dream when you sleep you will finally admit that
Things are getting better here
At twilight time
