Carlos Lyra, It's So Obvious

I don't know why I try to play naive. I can't believe I lie when it's so obvious That I love you, that I love you.

I just invent, Prevent, procrastinate. I complicate events, And it's so obvious That I love you, that I love you.

Why resist as if I were afraid When the trip I missed Is staring in my face?

I look at the facts, In fact, I realize It's not too wise to act When it's so obvious That I love you That I love you That I love you That I 'm in love with you.