

Charles Aznavour, Yesterday When I Was Young

Yesterday when I was young the taste of life was sweet like rain upon my tongue, I teased at life as if it were a foolish game the way an evening breeze would tease a candle flame,
The thousand dreams I dreamed, the splendid things I planned
I always built to last on weak and shifting sand, I lived by night and shunned the naked light of day and only now I see how the years have run away

Yesterday when I was young
there were so many songs that waited to be sung, So many wild pleasures that lay in store for me
and so much pain my dazzled eyes refused to see, I ran so fast that time and youth at last ran out and I never stopped to think what life was all about, and every conversation that I can recall concerned itself with me, and nothing else at all.

Yesterday the moon was blue and every crazy day brought something new to do, and I used my magic age as if it were a wand and never saw the waste and emptiness beyond, The game of love I played with arrogance and pride and every flame I lit so quickly, quickly died the friends I made all seemed, somehow, to drift away and only I am left on stage to end the play.

Yesterday when I was young
there were so many songs that waited to be sung,
So many wild pleasures lay in store for me
and so much pain my dazzled eyes refused to see,
There are so many songs in me that won't be sung cause I feel the bitter taste of tears upon my tongue
And the time has come for me to pay for yesterday
When I was young.
