

Charlotte Martin, Your Armor

Would you like the chance
To shatter heaven?
Would you like to be the one who
Pulls the sky down just for me?
Round and round and round we run
And pretend the sun is all you need

I've never known a moment
To be frozen
You're making deals with minutes that
Will slip away, just slip away
So starve the garden, stop the rain
Winter settles on my petals anyways
Anyways

Is your armor thin again
Do I want to wear it down?
Am I worthy to come in?
Do you want to be found?

Nothing into something into nothing
Every rule you break means
There's no turning back, no looking back.
The words that I could never say
The clutter that is in your way
Is nothing new
Nothing new

Is your armor thin again?
Do I want to wear it down?
Am I worthy to come in?
Do you want to be found?

Is your armor thin again?
Do I want to wear it down?
Am I worthy to come in?
Do you want to be found?

Wandering between the girl
You search for and the one you leave
And I cannot wait

Chasing you around the room is tempting
So near and far away from
Meaning anything to you
But just remember if you're jumping
I would start my jump off
Running after you

Is your armor thin again?
Do I want to wear it down?
Am I worthy to come in?
Do you want to be found?

Is your armor thin again?
Do I want to wear it down?
Am I worthy to come in?
Am I worthy to come in?
Am I worthy to come in?
Do you want to be found?
Do you want to be found?