

Chris Cornell, You Never Knew My Mind

I know you feel the way i changed but you ain't change the way I feel something I'm a stranger to me one of a kind and I think some way we'll make it through you don't know how to take it sometimes you're a stranger to me

one of a kind

there were times of lots of laughter and you felt you understood we were carefree, open and honest loving easy, kin and true and I suppose you never doubted

you never really knew my mind

my sounds hold the secrets when I answer but don't answer you did not see me well enough to recognize the signs you didn't want to notice but know that it was over I did not see you well enough to recognize the sighs

then you saw the changes painfully and you knew

sometimes I'm stranger to you and sometimes you're stranger to me sometimes, baby all the time you never really knew my mind I never really knew your mind
