Chris Tomlin, Captured

I heard your echo in the canyon Upon the timberline You said these mountains were Your invention And so was this heart of mine I heard You whisper on the water There on the mighty sea You spoke of love deep as the ocean When You spoke of Your love for me And I am loved by the Father And I am loved by the Son And it is love that has captured The heart of this wayward one I heard Your laughter in the sunrise Amidst the morning birds A song of freedom for all creation And you sang me every word And I am loved by the Father And I am loved by the Son And it is love that has captured The heart of this wayward one I heard You singing in the silence A simple melody Words of love, oh I can hear it My Father is very fond of me And I am loved by the Father And I am loved by the Son And it is love that has captured The heart of this wayward one And I am loved by the Father And I am loved by the Son, yeah And it is love that has captured The heart of this grateful one The heart of this grateful one