

Christian Death, Figurative Theatre (Rozz)

Christian Death
Only Theatre Of Pain
Figurative Theatre (Rozz)
In the shallow holes of a thousand eyes
in the knee-deep graves of future survivors
The fleshless guests live off children of the past Their aging fingers cast the Shadow of Death

(Chorus)
Their razor sharp tongues invite to relax
as they slip the skin of your eyelids back
invasive spectators
get into the act

with roses and candles silver knives and spoons persona read women dance with priests on a side road your vision perspectives are turning to stone
cabaret slide show starts shooting their loads Act one is the end, the show now begins

(chorus)
Breath ballet prancers spin on Porcelain backbone a child's muddled cry turns into hilarity ungracious freeloaders leave their dead on a doorstep Flowers of doom bloom in prosperity luxuries of past days are luxuries of our days
luxuries of past days
luxuries of our days
