

Christina Grimmie, Unforgivable

Okay, lets keep this simple
I do intend to live my life on the safe side
It's who I am, and it's who you aren't
I can, I can see you clearer
When you're not lying underneath it all
And I can't see your complexion
And I know your heart
The way you choose
You always want the best for you
But I'm standing here with crying eyes
I still see through your disguise

I never meant for you to choose
You should've known better
There's nothing left for you to loose
When you looked at me and said you had it all
But what you did; it's not unforgivable

And I know things have been going on
You know you can't erase your sin
And now you can't see your reflection
I know that your heart breaking
But is it as torn as mine?
You've already made it known
How much you lie is what you've shown
Everything inside my head
Won't leave me alone

I never meant for you to choose
You should've known better
There's nothing left for you to loose
When you looked at me and said you had it all
But what you did; it's not unforgivable

Even though it's been so long
Now I know this is where I don't want to be
And I know something's not right
Now I'm telling you get off of me

I never meant for you to choose
You should've known better
There's nothing left for you to loose
When you looked at me and said you had it all
But what you did; it's not unforgivable.

I never meant for you to choose
You should've known better
There's nothing left for you to loose
When you looked at me and said you had it all
But what you did; it's not unforgivable.
