Christopher Cross, I Hear You Call

Moving in and out of light Changing shapes of shadowed life Bleeding out white Pastel to true color Path crosses path ahead Which way do I go Did you go, did you go Just before I'm lost There's a heart on the wind I can hear your voice again I can feel your love again I hear you call Soothing motion of a dying storm Morning tumbles from a golden horn What you loved, what you lost, what you gained Are the things that can set you free Forgiving bridge of now and then Time's a canyon you can cross again Soul touches soul And the sound that they make will never end I can hear your voice again I can feel your love again I hear you call I can hear your voice's calling me I can feel your love again I can hear your voice's calling me There's a hero's hand Breakin' my fall You drown the siren's song When I hear you call I can hear your voice's calling me I can feel your love again I can hear your voice's calling me I can hear your voice's calling me I can feel your love again I can hear your voice's calling me I can hear your voice's calling me I can feel your love again I can hear your voice's calling me