

Cinerama, 146 Degrees

You've just walked in this room but things have changed forever now
Because you're the only thing in view
And when my girlfriend asks you: "please could you tell me how You get them all to stare at you?"

You smile and say it's not your fault
Meanwhile the world's come to a halt

And once you've caught our gaze you'll never let it go again
But, oh, we'd never want you to
Because we're your puppets, yeah, women just as much as men
No one can take their eyes off you

You smile and say it's not your fault
Meanwhile the world's come to a halt