Clay Crosse, 98

Come on and gather round And listen to my story About a fall from grace A change of heart A rise to glory A lesson learned A doorway I went through

Now all I know is I was born to lead
And not to follow
But the places that I led
Turned out to be so hollow
And in the end
I just turned out to be a fool
Justification would make me shine
My performance a work of art
All I ever wanted was to walk that line
But I jumped across and broke Your heart

CHORUS:

For all I've learned
The days I lived it were so rare
The dust of innocence
I scattered who knows where
And when I turned my back on You
You stood right there
And You never left me
No You never left me

These scars I have
I know they are here to remind me
That everything I've said and done
I can leave far behind me
The door is shut
And I shall nevermore return
Everybody says that your childhood dies

A little bit more every day But all around me are mercy's eyes And they'll keep me close to You I pray

Repeat CHORUS

You know I came to love You as a young man Many years ago But now You've brought me out of harm And I feel just like a baby in Your arms
