

Cock Robin, Thought You Were On My Side (Ext)

Not without reason have I been wrong
Just a few tough demands
On a personal friend I could lean, lean on

Desperate and selfish, I know that I was
We drank all our fill
But I'd swear there was poison in my cup of your
Of your good intentions what has become

I thought you were on my side
Must you add the weight
You said it would be even
When splitting up the stakes
I thought you were on my side
Were we not the rage
Down the center line
What's yours is yours and mine
Just like always
Down the center line
What's yours is yours and mine
Just like always

Hurting for freedom, hellbent for lust
It's an unlikely thing that I'd be bumping in
To someone I could trust

I'm far from resigning
Though I'm faint from exhaust
Just because I'm on edge
Do I have to let somebody come push me off
Is it the belonging or something you've lost

I thought you were on my side
Must you add the weight
You said it would be even
When splitting up the stakes
I thought you were on my side
Were we not the rage
Down the center line
What's yours is yours and mine
Just like always

Just like always
Just like always

What's yours is yours and mine
Just like always
Down the center line
What's yours is yours and mine
Just like always

(Repeat)

I thought you were on my side
I thought you were on my side
Were we not the rage
Down the center line
Just like always

Down the center line
Just like always
Down the center line

What's yours is yours and mine
