

Conflict, Climbing The Stairs

Standing alone in a mystery
Standing alone in misery
The start of the war, it's the first to die
So on my own, in not the place to be First, I see visions of insane men unaware on the Stairs, caught by the same gang
Pure hatred on young and aged faces there's one, two, three, but they ain't leaving traces
As someone pushes past, I'm caught right in their path.
I try to respond, But this just raises a laugh
A clenched fist punches hard, smashing the face
I try to turn and run, but they're all over the place
I'm pulling hard on the tair rail, but this ain't my Night my shirt rips in two, as they hold me so tight
I feel a terrible blow, as something collides with Skull I fight back so hard, but the blades take their Toll so many shots on target, on the floor curled up
Tight the crazed just won't stop,
Is this finally goodnight?
Now a feeling so strange, something won't let it die
And can't let them screw up the rest of our lives.
I'm losing all, all track of time
I feel the pain of a real life crime
Boy they roar, let's open up his head
Hey you; see how far you've pushed this
I'm now praying that someone will turn up soon
I'm unaware they're creeping down the backstairs
I shout "Hey, what am I getting this for?,
I weren't even there, I didn't go past the door"
But the baton rains down, the boots pile in Why don't they leave it, look at the state that I'm in
The choppers chops hard, the blade cuts deep
Flesh hangs off in slices and I start to weep
The baton rains down, the boots pile in
I feel a strange peacefulness building up within
The choppers chops hard, the blood runs red
I feel total release, I think I must be dead
Back alive in the shadow of a dead man
I'm not alone? I'm reaching for the stair rails
Instead I grab the hand of the father
I see a face, it's the face of mother
There's someone else, It's the mother of my mother
Whose strong man is helping me
Climb up the stairs from the misery climb and climb,
The stairs from the misery climbing the stairs
For the unaware?
To see