

Craig's Brother, One

All grievances reached no words to be said
The barrier breached now come lay your head
And she's found a new way her hands letting go (hurting so)
You've too much to say your new words heard old (letting go)
Down on your knees it's a long extra mile (letting go)
Giving your faith just for a smile

Your finding some way to go crawling back again
She wonders why her boy didn't run
Remembering two who had something special then
Sometime someday there'll be only one

The passages preached roused notions of warn
Elasticity reached allegiance near torn
And she's flying away to new foreign lands (hurting so)
Your searching for faults on grounds that you stand (letting go)
Without her the dream it ceases to be (letting go)
But tomorrow you'll wake and maybe you'll see

Your finding some way to stumble along again
We wonder why, why ever you've gone
Remembering two who had something special then
Just for today there'll be only one

One understanding one thought that she left you
One more that takes it one less that makes you whole
She's seeking the truth the words that she left
Your riddled by ask and all out of breath
Resounding the voice reconciled song
You've created the choice now will you stand strong

Your finding the way keep pushing along my friend
She's seeing the worth in all that you've done
Remembering two who had something special then
Sometime someday there'll be only
Looks like today there'll be only
Now on your way you'll only be one