

Crushead, Embrace Opportunity walking through the city is a torment once again in every street on every place is election campaign they're smiling and they're laughing some looking seriously and in the evening you can watch them on TV discussing, altercating , trying to put each other down endless conversations endless monologues about the failures of the government and of the given law and after that you find yourself as clever as before

'cause we need more than just words we need energy and deeds it's not the way just to talk and to get each other down when aspiration for success becomes embarrassing when bigmouths in a suit act like the greatest kings when the headscarf of a teacher is a reason to discuss and nuclear power stations are second-hand stuff is it necessary to always have the final word just to say a sentence is a double-edged sword match the action to the word dont get lost in dispute seize an opportunity stop the apocalyptic mood.

its your duty to be human its worth making the effort sometimes its difficult to breast the waves you are chosen ones, so dont lose too many words make something happen, bias things in the right direction
