Dag Nasty, Thin Line

there's a thin line between love and hate I'm standing in a no-man's land and I'm afraid to try and reach the other side how could you give back what you took and tried to hide? I should have never trusted you left you by yourself I watched for far too long you made me think you were in touch and oh the pain I felt when I knew you'd moved on I never realized you were running in circles I let you lead when I knew damn well you were blind I trusted you