Damien Jurado, Hoquiam

Standing with my feet deep in the ground Was I nothing but a landslide in your mind? Am I no one until someone calls me out? Are you just pretending when we talk?

You should have seen me Keeping watch at dawn

Picture now a car ride through the plains Where east meets west and only sky remain Were you faking death to only gain concern? The cut out lights and signals told us wrong

You should have seen us Carefree behind the wheel

Lover I am still here breaking chairs Will I ever be the hero in your song Or forever in your shadow so unseen? Trapped between the lines that you write down?

You should have told me Broken jaw and all Crippled in your glory Restless till my death
