

Dear And The Headlights, I Just Do

Oh, so the words have all been said
The feeling's old, but it's new to me, I guess
I'm scared to death, but
Oh! I just love you
Oh! I just love you

I'm telling my friends, "I gotta go"
That I need rest, but I'm running for the phone
I think Casey knows, but
Oh! I just love you
Oh! I just love you

Watch now on my wrist, a collared shirt, and hair clean, cut, sculpted
I'll iron out the flaws,
Come meet your new in-laws,
Oh here's the awkward pause

When I look at you,
I've caught myself off-guard a time or two.
Those funny times I realize that I've been staring
Way too long and you're done talking
Not to mention I've stopped breathing
Such a mess!

Rushing to open your car door,
You lean and open mine before
I can turn the key, and
Oh! I just love you
Oh! I just love you

Calling to say hi on your break,
In less than twenty words,
You made my whole damn day, and
Oh! I just love you
Oh! I just love you

In the coffee shop you sipped your drink
And we all sat and talked.
My mind it wandered off alone to find a thought
As beauty poured out when you talked.
You stand still in my sight,
A switch got hit somewhere back in my mind
Just then I realized there what I have to do,
Because I couldn't stand to look at you
Across another crowded room
And know that you would not be mine.

Oh, time drags its feet,
But somehow you sneak it past me
Night after night.
At this rate if you stay with me,
You'll go to bed at twenty-three,
And wake up sixty-five.
Well next to you that would be just fine, That'd be just fine.

Rushing to open your car door,
You lean and open mine before
Oh! I just love you
Oh! I just love you

Calling to say hi on your break,
You made my whole damn day, and
Oh! I just love you
Oh! I just love you

Oh! I just love you
Oh! I just love you
