Depswa, Silhouette

Sometimes Mixed emotions they ramble on inside For a false sense of reality So I try to escape From this place that brings me down Cause I feel there's nothing else Left inside me anymore

And I thought I saw a faint silhouette of you Here in my mind again I thought I saw a faint silhouette of you But now I can't find you anymore

And I try to erase all these feelings that I have Of that happy perfect life There's just a cold and darkened memory And i have to pretend that you're here for awhile But I know that's just a wishful temporary remedy

And I want to There's a need to To believe in something Something that won't leave me heartless And I want to There's a need to Know that there's something Something that won't pass me by

And I thought I saw a faint silhouette of you Here in my mind again I thought I saw a faint silhouette of you But now I can't find you anymore

I know that there's reasons to forget what was had To leave all our past behind us So I try to make myself forget But it really hasn't happened yet And I know that there must be a reason why

And I want to There's a need to To believe in something Something that won't leave me heartless And I want to There's a need to Know that there's something Something that won't pass me by

I thought I saw a faint silhouette of you Here in my mind again I thought I saw a faint silhouette of you But now I can't find you anymore

I thought I saw a faint silhouette of you But now I can't find

I thought I saw a faint silhouette of you But now I can't find you anymore

I thought I saw a faint silhouette of you But now I can't find you anymore
