Diana Ross, That's How You Start Over

(M. McDonald/E. Sanford)

It may seem like the wrong time To let somebody near But baby don't fear me I just want to lend an ear

You can run for cover Oh, but darling, don't you see For every smile there's a teardrop And that's just how it's gonna be

So it went wrong, somewhere down the line But you can't hold on, it's just a waste of time

Boy you're gonna laugh (just a little bit) And live through some tears (just a little bit) Until you finally learn (that the point of it) Is that love will come again

That's how you start over That's how you begin again That's how you start over

Anyone who's lost love Always seems to swear To never give your heart away For someone to share

Listen to your heart, each beat brings you nearer Till you understand, nothing seems too clear

Boy you're gonna laugh (just a little bit) And live through some tears (just a little bit) Until you finally learn (that the point of it) Is that love will come again

That's how you start over That's how you begin again That's how you start over Love will come again