Diana Ross, We're Always Saying Goodbye

Stranger before Lovers and then People become Strangers again

All things born Knowing they'll die We're always saying goodbye

Children make friends Holding them near People change times Friends disappear

Life must go on Children must cry We're always sayimg goodbye

Rivers go on and on The sun always shines The people just run out of time

Why are we here Where do we go Just when we've learn the little we know Life, love and dreams End with the sigh We're always saying goodbye

Rivers go on and on The sun always shines Why do people just run out of time

Why are we here Where do we go Just when we've learn the little we know Life, love and dreams End with the sigh somebody somewhere knows why

We're always saying goodbye
