Dillon, Abrupt Clarity

As a tornado took shape I came to see

For an hour or so, stood on that field Watched the dirt rise As if paralysed

The closer i got
The less i could feel
The louder it got
The more it seemed real

When rain hit my skin Abrupt clarity

I had witnessed A rarity

As the sky cleared Doubt disappeared

Without evidence Or resonance