

Dogma, Delusions

There's an angel in one of my dreams
She haunts me with questions about the things I have seen
There are liars who don't like to admit
A straight answer is something they may live to regret

Oh, I'd give it all away for an answer
Someone to tell me the truth
I'd give it all away for an answer

Projecting your illusions so the world won't seem so strange
Sometimes your delusions are enough to keep you sane

There are addicts who use to kill their pain
While others chase money and titles to do the same
There are people who will tell you to quit
They'll help find you a hole and push you down til you fit

Well I'd give it all away for an answer
Someone to tell me the truth
I'd give it all away for an answer

Protecting your illusions so the world won't have to change
Sometimes your delusions are the cause of all your pain

Well I'd give it all away for an answer
Someone to tell me the truth
Well I'd give it all away for an answer