

Dogma, Shattered Glass

I won't knock your decision
And I won't question your wisdom
I'll stop breaking things open to see what ticks
Is easy to see what's broken and not know what to fix

I was smart but never wise
I should have looked with my heart and not my eyes
Looking through shattered glass
'Cause I've been looking through shattered glass, shattered glass yeah

I built my house in the sky
And I based the truth on some lies
I didn't think it would all come crashing down
In the blink of an eye and without a sound

I was smart but never wise
I should have looked with my heart and not my eyes
Looking through shattered glass
'Cause I've been looking through shattered glass, shattered glass yeah

I was smart but never wise
I should have looked with my heart and not my eyes
Looking through shattered glass
'Cause I've been looking through shattered glass, shattered glass yeah